SCHEDULE-A

A Point of Care test for the qualitative diagnosis of Glucose-6-phosphate Dehydrogenase (G6PD) deficiency

i. About the Technology/Product/Process:

The proposed product/kit can detect the deficiency due to G6PD enzyme using the whole blood samples of patients with haemolytic anemia, neonatal jaundice

ii. Need and utility of the Technology from Public health perspective:

G6PD deficiency is highly common among Indians and the frequency varies from 0-30.4% in different population groups. Malaria is one of the major causes of death in India and since G6PD deficiency is not uncommon, thus a POC for G6PD deficiency is needed. This will help the primary health centers to know the G6PD status of an individual prior to anti-malarial therapy. In most diagnostic labs in India, techniques employed for the diagnosis of G6PD deficiency requires incubator at 37°C, reagents storage at -20°C and requires other consumables. As of date, no Indian company is manufacturing the Point-of-care diagnostic kit for testing G6PD deficiency. Thus, there is a need of a sensitive but cost effective and easy to use diagnostic assay for detection of G6PD deficiency.

iii. Technology Readiness level (TRL)

The technology for “A Point of Care test for the qualitative diagnosis of Glucose-6-phosphate Dehydrogenase (G6PD) deficiency” has been developed and standardized at ICMR-NIIH, Mumbai. The technology has been validated on large number of clinical samples from hospitals in comparison to the standard commercial assays. The technology is ready to transfer for commercialization.

iv. Validation Status and outcome:

The assay has been independently validated internally with a sensitivity of 97.6% and specificity of 100% as well as by two external hematology laboratories.

Glucose-6-phosphate Dehydrogenase (G6PD) deficiency causes haemolytic anaemia which is most often triggered by bacterial or viral infections or by certain drugs (such as some antibiotics and medications used to treat malaria). A Point of Care test for the qualitative diagnosis of Glucose -6-phosphate Dehydrogenase (G6PD) deficiency” will help identify these patients and thus help in treatment and anti-malarial therapy. This kit has the ability to detect G6PD deficiency (within 30 minutes). It confers advantage for the bedside patients in hospitals and making quick decisions for the administration of antimalarial and other oxidative drugs among the vulnerable groups.

v. IP Filing Status/Publications

Publication is in progress.
